

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

When a user works data required for allowance for the use thereof, the work processing is carried out by utilizing an exclusive work processing device. Thereafter, only the data of work information indicating what kind of working has been made to the original data (for example, differential static image data indicating a difference between the original static image required for allowance for the use and the static image after having been worked) is stored, whereby the use without permission of the data is prevented.